

THE NATIONAL COUNSELLING NETWORK

The National Counselling Network (NCN) is an association of BACP or BPC accredited counselling centres which hold a common aim to offer high quality and professional counselling to their local communities. In addition to being psychodynamically oriented, members differentiate themselves from other counselling organisations by:

- delivering professional, affordable/low cost counselling
- being independent third sector providers
- providing an alternative to the NHS and
- ensuring that new clients are seen in a relatively short timeframe.

NCN members meet, communicate, network and share best practice, particularly in respect of psychodynamically led counselling.
